CSU students trial date set:

CLEVELAND The trial of eight Cleveland State University students charged with rape has been scheduled for Sept. 30 before Judge Daniel O. Corrigan in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court.

Prosecutors filed court papers last week asking that the trial be moved to another county. They also asked for an order blocking defense lawyers from questioning the victim about her sexual history at CSU.

A 20-year-old sophomore alleged that she was gang-raped Dec. 8 at a dormitory.

A ninth student charged in the case pleaded guilty to a lesser charge. Jason Cordial, 19, accepted a deal that allowed him to plead guilty to sexual imposition, a misdemeanor, in return for his promise to testify against the other eight.

House Committee slates abortion-rights into law

by William M. Welch
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON The House Judiciary Committee approved a bill Tuesday making the right to abortion part of federal law. The action came a day after a Supreme Court decision that supporters of the bill said left a constitutional void.

The panel's action on a 20-13 bill sets the stage for a vote by the full House. Supporters said the measure would codify into federal law the abortion-rights guarantees established in the 19-year-old Roe v. Wade decision.

"The Congress has the power, indeed the responsibility, to fill the constitutional void left by the court," said the committee chairman, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

In its decision, the high court upheld most of the abortion restrictions in a Pennsylvania law. But a narrow majority also affirmed the Roe v. Wade decision that established a woman's legal right to an abortion.

House leaders say they expect a vote on the bill after the Democratic National Convention in July.

A similar bill faces a Senate committee vote Wednesday, and action by the full Senate is also expected soon.

Earthquakes, aftershocks cause further water shortages

by Michael Fleeman
The Associated Press

YUCCA VALLEY, Calif. -- For thousands in the desert, the destruction caused by the earthquakes and the lingering fear of aftershocks would be easier to take if something drinkable would just pour out of their faucets.

Some 27,000 people had contaminated water or no water at all, and repairs could take up to a week, officials said. Hundreds lined up Monday in 90-degree temperatures to fill plastic jugs from public taps and tank trucks.

"I keep asking myself, what would a Bedouin do in a situation like this?" building supply salesman Joe Selva said as he filled five-gallon jugs. "I'm eating sandwiches, salads -- stuff you can cook really easy and not use a lot of water."

Water systems were further damaged Monday by four sharp aftershocks measuring between 4.9 and 5.4 on the Richter scale.

The tremors caused a 96-foot-long brick facing to crash down from a one-story building that housed three businesses. No one

Increase in tuition, effective next year

by Amy Applebaum
managing editor

Tuition for the 1992-93 academic year will be increased to the maximum allowable level due to a recent Board of Trustees resolution.

At the Board's Friday meeting, trustees unanimously approved a 1992-93 budget that calls for a 7 percent tuition increase with provisions to raise tuition even higher should the state-imposed tuition cap be raised to 9 percent.

The actual amount of reductions and tuition level will be determined by the eventual cap on student tuition set by the state.

Also, for the second year in a row there will be no salary increases at the University.

President Olscamp in his report to the Board of Trustees said the administration is hopeful the tuition cap will be increased in order that the University doesn't suffer any further loss of projected income.

"If the fee cap is not increased from 7 to 9 percent by the state legislature, then our revenue decrease will be that much greater."

Olscamp further stated he expects the tuition cap increase to be announced by the state this week.

Holiday weekend has bands, skits, fireworks and fun

by William R. Ketelhut
staff writer

If you plan on staying put in Bowling Green for the holiday weekend, there are a number of events going on to keep even the pickiest person entertained.

The Parks and Recreation Department is hosting plenty of activities this year at the City Park in honor of Independence Day.

July 1, the Youth Theater class at the park will present a collection of short skits. The class is made up of youngsters from six to 14 years old and is directed by Lizzie Barone.

Barone said the skits are designed to show the kids the many different reasons to get involved in theater.

According to Barone, among the several skits are two adaptations of the popular Berenstain Bears children's books, a bit from the "Sound Of Music" and a D.A.R.E. skit.

The play starts at 7 p.m. and will be conducted at Needle Hall in the City Park.

For those people in love with the old melodramas, you can catch a free presentation of "The Drunkard."

The play is being performed by the Park and Recreational Theatrical Group and stars students, faculty, townspeople and a surprise official in a leading role, according to Recreational Coordinator Bob Hastings.

Hastings said the play is similar to what you would see in a Bullwinkle cartoon.

Hastings said the play does deal with the important issue of alcoholism which he said some people might find offensive, but stresses that the play is set up for fun.

"The Drunkard" will be performed on July 2, 4 and 5 at Needle Park. Shows begin at 7 p.m., but doors open at 6:15.

There will also be a special Friday concert featuring the A Cappella Vocal Band, a very popular Christian group.

Hastings said the event should command a big turnout. This event will start at 7 p.m.

If fireworks are your idea of celebrating the Fourth of July, you don't want to miss the fireworks display sponsored by Hills Department Store, 1234 N. Main St.

The event will be conducted adjacent to the store after the store's closing.

Manager Bruce Kohler said this event has been a tradition for 28 years, and will light up the skies at 9:45 p.m. July 4.

For those people looking for a change of pace from being in Bowling Green, you can travel up to Toledo's Rally By The River.

You can enjoy three days of food, fun, and music starting Friday at 5 p.m.

The locally renowned Flaming Buckeyes will hit the stage and will be opening for the popular 70s duo of Seals And Croft, known for such hits as 'Diamond Girl,' 'Summer Breeze' and 'Get Closer' Friday. They are scheduled to hit the stage at 6:30.

On Saturday, the festivities continue from 4 to 10 p.m. and will be capped off by a huge fireworks display over the river. In case of bad weather, they will be rescheduled for Sunday.

Also on Saturday, the Portage Quarry will be hosting the 11th annual Fourth of July Blowout, featuring several local bands. Co-sponsored by WIOT-FM, the Blowout expects to attract about 2,000 people. Tickets are $10 in advance and $13 at the door.

Orwell's 1984 revisited?

Undeclared presidential candidate Ross Perot is proving to be more of a seasoned politician with each of the several daily news items concerning him. Recently, Perot's top aide described reports that the Texas billionaire often uses private investigators as "distortion."

President Bush said he was perturbed when he learned that he and his family were among those investigated.

Being nosy is generally accepted as being a part of human nature, and having the infinite amount of money Perot has, it is not too surprising he resorted to such tactics. However, being that Perot is a candidate for the highest office in the land, a question of ethics must be raised.

Is it ethical for a Presidential candidate to hire private detectives to investigate his opponents? Even if it is, is it ethical for Perot to investigate his opponents' families? George Bush and Bill Clinton are Perot's opponents - not their sons, daughters, wives or other family members. If elected, who is to say that Perot will not take this tendency for buying investigators to the White House with him? One U.S. President was already forced to resign in shame because of his affinity for spying on his opponents. Perot has already proposed his "electronic town hall." Would it be that hard, once the electronic town hall was in place, to turn its technology into a Big Brother-like surveillance system?

Perot may very well become President of the United States. There are several decisions the American public must make in choosing a President. Among these decisions is whether or not the public wants a President who is likely to take his snoopery nature to the White House with him, possibly transforming the nation into an Orwellian state devoid of trust that is crawling with spies.

Presidential polls do not represent public feelings

Forget the polls. Forget Bill Clinton. Dismiss Ross Perot. As the 1992 presidential campaign draws closer and closer to its climax this November, one thing becomes increasingly clear; George Bush will win the election, hands down.

Given, the press coverage of the campaign paints a gloomy picture for the President. But is this picture a clear representation of what most Americans truly feel? I don't think so.

In the months to come, the attention given to Clinton and Perot will dwindle as a tougher scrutiny is enacted on their platforms. President Bush will slowly emerge as the overwhelming choice, and for some very good reasons.

The President's biggest asset is his record on foreign policy. He has proven over the last decade he is a man who knows the importance of U.S. relations abroad.

The future of our economic success will depend, solely, on our connections and relations within the global market. George Bush has worked continually to build and strengthen these important alliances, and has measured great success.

Neither Clinton nor Perot possess the capability or experience to ensure that these relations grow in the crucial years ahead.

The President also realizes that raising taxes will not repair the economic state we are in. I find it hard to believe the American public is as ignorant as the media portrays them to be.

Americans know that Congress, not the White House, con-controls the purse strings. Presidents can only invoke policies, they cannot impose law.

I believe the public is smart enough to make this important distinction, and will realize that "soaking the rich" with higher taxes will have a negative, not positive, effect on the nation's economy.

Only by giving businesses incentives to expand, via capital gains tax cuts, will we see a true rebound in the job market.

Businesses already pay more than their "fair share" as Mr. Clinton likes to call it.

Give it a break already. A good example of the negative effects of higher taxes on businesses is the recently repealed luxury tax. Congress, in its infinite wisdom, deemed it necessary to raise the tax on "luxury items" like boats, expensive autos, and business aircraft.

The results were disastrous. Those looking to buy these items simply took their business overseas, leaving American producers out in the cold. The resulting layoffs of American workers, combined with the loss of tax revenue from low sales, actually cost us more than it made us.

Raising taxes on the "rich" is not the answer to our economic woes. Loosening the reigns on them is.

As far as Ross Perot is concerned, his demise will be self-invoked. His theory of the "electronic town hall" is being challenged from all sides. The brunt of the argument is that the concept is, essentially, direct democracy - something our constitution was designed to keep out of our government.

Electronic town halls rely on computer and satellite technology to connect voters directly with the president to discuss, and then vote on, national issues.

The concept effectively bypasses the representative branch of our government, and would allow the majority to impose their will on the minority. This attack on what is, so far, Perot's only position on anything, has signaled what I believe to be the beginning of the end of his political career.

The examples set forth in this article are only the very top of the mountain of inequities that exist between George Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot.

The anti-incumbent fever will sweep, thankfully, through the House and Senate, but will, as if intervened by higher authority, skip the White House.

America is changing its political thinking, and George Bush is the only candidate that can lead us back to the values and ideals that made this country what it is today, and America will prove it come this November.

Students need democracy and awareness of secrets

Most of you probably remember last semester when a group of students protested the unfair wording in the University's discrimination policy. Because of ROTC's anti-gay policy, the University placed an asterisk next to the words "sexual orientation" and exempted "outside organizations" from adhering to the policy.

Martha P. Larson

The students involved in the protest felt that the wording, besides being hypocritical, alienated a number of students by openly stating that gays had fewer rights at this University than other minorities. A group of students met with Bob Arrowsmith to discuss a possible change in the student code. Recently, one of these students, Michael Haynes, received a telephone call from Arrowsmith saying that the legal advisory council had decided that the code could not be changed.

When Haynes asked why this decision had been made, Arrowsmith merely said that the council had decided not to advise it. When Haynes asked who the people on the legal council were, he was again denied information. Haynes then reminded Arrowsmith that the code is misleading and again asked why the decision had been made.

Arrowsmith once again begged the question by saying that he had been advised to keep the code as it previously stood.

The point is not that the code was not changed or even that it should be changed. I'm not going to try and argue that. The point is that secret-keeping is going on, and students are not even told why these decisions are made.

This story is merely another example of the anti-democratic practices that go on here at the University.

Another example is the Falcon Fieldhouse. We've all heard the story a million times: the money for the fieldhouse is in a different fund, the money has already been earmarked for the fieldhouse, blah, blah, blah.

However, we aren't told why these funds can't be moved or exactly what the legal speak is behind them. Don't tell me there isn't a way around this mess.

Something else that hasn't even been addressed about the fieldhouse is the future costs of ests; instead they curry favor within their various departments. This is at least partially understandable when you consider the screwed-up miniature autocracy they have to work in.

The Students: That's us! We're the peasant group who pays to come here and get exploited. Because we have so little power within the University sphere, we can get kicked, stepped on, and robbed, and really can't change things.

We are consumers with almost no control over what is consumed. We're bottom-rung, lowest-class, and you're kidding yourself if you think the University is here for us.

What we need is a democratically run University, not one whose policies are dictated from above. Frankly, the students should be the ones to elect the president of the University, not the Board of Trustees. Sure, students are only here for four years. But what's to prevent yearly elections? If a president was actually any good, she or he would have no problem getting re-elected year-to-year.

Also, students should decide where our tuition is spent. Why wasn't a campus-wide referendum taken on the Fieldhouse, for example? Students should also have the right to determine which faculty stays, which leaves, which gets a pay raise, and which gets a pay cut. Who knows a faculty person's teaching skills better than her or his students?

I'll be honest; I'm not really sure how to carry these ideas out. Perhaps students could form a sort of lobby group. Maybe we could refuse to pay tuition until our demands are met.

Or there's always the possibility of an actual takeover of the University. The point of this column isn't to provide an ideal solution. The point is to expose the hypocrisy and anti-democratic practices of this University.

The students are supposed to be the purpose of this University. Also, this University is supposed to be in accordance with the principles of democracy.

I guess the joke's on us. Martha P. Larson is a columnist for The News.

The point is not that the code was not changed or even that it should be changed. I'm not going to try and argue that. The point is that secret-keeping is going on, and students are not even told why these decisions are made.

Paul Olscamp: If you don't know what Olscamp looks like, which is entirely possible because he's here so infrequently, just watch his cute little ad spot. According to Olscamp, the solution to students' worries about the budget cuts is for them to "stop worrying." This man must think we are idiots.

The Board of Trustees: These people are sort of a vanguard party appointed by Governor Voinovich. Usually they have little or nothing to do with the University or higher education in general except for the fact that they get to choose who the president is.

The Faculty: This is a bizarre mix of people. Some are exploited, and some are exploiters. Others just stand back on the sidelines and watch.

For the most part they don't serve the students' best inter-

New bar 'trods' into town

Local establishment looks to grand opening

by William R. Kettelhut
staff writer

Race horses come in two varieties. First, there are those which are built for speed, and they are called pacers. The second type are bred for slower racing and are called trodders, which also happens to be the name of Bowling Green's newest watering hole.

Located at 119 North Main St., Trodders can be identified by a neon sign with pink and green letters and the silhouette of a race horse.

Inside, clean wood floors, quaint tables, and various horse racing paraphernalia make up the environment.

John and Judy Brown are looking forward to the opening of their newest business venture.

They are also the owners of the automotive marketing company Wes/Tele-Communications. In their spare time, they raise trodders.

Mr. Brown said he admits that owning a tavern has always been a dream of his, and thanks to the success of their other business, they have the financial freedom to start the tavern, even though it may seem a risky venture in these lean times.

By opening in the summer, Mr. Brown said that it will give them a chance to get some practice in running a bar before the large college crowd arrives in the fall.

Brown said he sees the tavern as a quiet, neighborhood place where people can go to relax with their friends and enjoy good food and light music.

He said he hopes the tavern will also help benefit the Bowling Green economy.

Some ideas for attracting patrons include 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. happy hours during the week, reasonably-priced dinners on the weekends and daily lunch specials.

Their love for art has encouraged them to make plans to display the work of various art majors from the University, some possibly for sale.

Other plans are being kept secret, but they have many.

Depending on when various small jobs get finished, they hope to have the grand opening by the end of the week, so start watching for signs. Brown related his thanks to the many officials who have made their venture an enjoyable experience.

Building to be constructed for nuclear waste at OSU

Star Banc rejects offer from Fifth Third buyout

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) Ohio State University will store low-level radioactive waste at the campus until a permanent storage site is built in Ohio, the university's director of radiation safety said.

The campus storage building could begin operating in 1993 and would handle waste generated in about 500 labs at the university, Walter Carey said Monday.

The waste would include gloves, laboratory equipment and other material used in medical procedures and experiments, and from bioengineering research. The dry waste would be stored in 55-gallon drums.

"The risk isn't direct radiation. It's more keeping the material contained," Carey said.

Ohio State now sends the waste to a multi-state storage center at Barnwell, S.C. That site was scheduled to close at the end of this year, but the South Carolina General Assembly agreed to allow the site to stay open until 1996 and to accept out-of-state waste until 1994.

A permanent storage site is planned in Ohio for use by states in the Midwest Low-Level Radioactive Waste Commission. The states are Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri and Wisconsin.

Gregg Larson, executive director of the commission, said the site probably would not be in operation until at least 1998.

The campus storage site would cost an estimated $500,000. Carey said state funding was requested but not expected. He said the university may finance the project with money from some scientific grants.

Larson said the commission is paying Ohio State $274,000 for one year to develop a program to educate Ohioans about low-level radioactive waste storage.

CINCINNATI (AP) Star Banc Corp. said Tuesday it has rejected a second unsolicited buyout offer from Fifth Third Bancorp and considers the takeover proposal to be a closed issue.

Star Banc said that Fifth Third offered $42 per share, to be paid in Fifth Third common shares. Star's board of directors said it unanimously rejected the offer Tuesday as inadequate, and said Star would best serve its stockholders by continuing as an independent corporation.

Fifth Third spokeswoman Patti Stanley declined to confirm whether Fifth Third had made the renewed offer. She said the company had no comment.

Star said Fifth Third's offer would not have adequately protected Star's shareholders if the market price of Fifth Third's stock were to decline, or grow more slowly than projected.

On April 14, Star Banc said it rejected a Fifth Third offer of $38 to $40 per share. Star said that offer also was unsolicited, inadequate and not in the company's best interests.

Oliver Waddell, Star Banc's chairman and chief executive officer, said his company has strong growth prospects, including the $16 million purchase it completed June 19 of 28 Cleveland-area offices from Ameritrust Co.

Waddell said Star has already been recommended by some as an investment prospect. Smart Money magazine in April ranked Star Banc as No. 31 among the top 50 growth stocks for the 1990s, Star Banc said.

Waddell said he met with George Schaefer Jr., Fifth Third's president and chief executive officer, to discuss the $42 per share offer.

"It is our firm belief that Fifth Third's offer doesn't reflect the values inherent in Star, or the future prospects of the company," Waddell said. "It's the tough, but friendly, competition between Fifth Third and Star Banc that has made both of us successful and financially strong. We keep each other on our toes."

Fifth Third has 4,200 employees and $9.3 billion in assets. Star Banc has 3,800 employees and $7.7 billion in assets, including the Cleveland purchase.

A combination of the two bank holding companies would create an entity with about $17 billion in assets and more than 400 offices.

In midday trading on the Nasdaq national market Tuesday, Fifth Third was up 75 cents per share at $42.50 and Star Banc was down 50 cents at $37.

Navy loses in sex scandal case

WASHINGTON The House Appropriations Committee took out its anger over the Navy's handling of the Tailhook sex abuse scandal Monday by voting to slash 10,000 positions from the service's headquarters.

The action is part of a $253 billion defense budget the panel approved by voice vote for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The overall spending package is about $9 billion less than President Bush requested.

Offended by the Tailhook incident and the Navy's inquiry, members of the panel sought to punish the service by cutting its budget.

The committee voted to eliminate 10,000 administrative and management jobs at departmental and major command headquarters and recommended that the reductions come from the Washington, D.C., area.

The Navy said Monday it didn't immediately know the total number of people who worked at its headquarters.

The full House considers the defense budget on Thursday and probably will approve the job reductions. The Senate is not expected to complete its version of the bill until September.

The cuts could be trimmed or eliminated when lawmakers from the House and Senate meet in conference to work out a final version of the bill. Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the Appropriations defense subcommittee, said any changes depend on the Navy's response.

"It's directly connected to the obstruction and arrogance in the Navy," Murtha said.

At the 1991 meeting of the Tailhook Association, at least 26 women half of them Navy officers said they were fondled and disrobed while being pushed down a gantlet of drunken aviators in a Las Vegas hotel hallway.

Initial Navy inquiries implicated only two men although 1,500 people were interviewed. The Navy investigator said some senior officers refused to allow their men to be photographed, or otherwise impeded the probe.

The Pentagon's inspector general is now investigating the incident. The Navy has said about 70 officers could face disciplinary action.

"It's a cover-up," said Murtha, who noted that the Navy released the report on its nearly six-month inquiry before the inspector general had an opportunity to comment.

During debate on the defense budget, the Tailhook incident prompted emotional responses from lawmakers.

Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., said he had three daughters in their 20s, and "if somebody treated my daughters that way, ... I'd tear him apart."

Murtha, a former Marine, accused the Navy of stonewalling his panel, which has sought information for the past two years on an incident at the U.S. Naval Academy in which a female cadet was chained to a urinal.

In the Tailhook case, Murtha said he was "outraged by the conduct of military officers against other military officers. It's a cowardly act under any circumstances."

blow of Gov. George Voinovich's 15 percent reduction in state instructional subsidies, the University Monday notified University employees of their layoffs.

The educational budget anticipates a loss for the University of $6.25 million.

The budget reductions, the largest in University history, will mean the University will begin the year with 115 fewer personnel, including 33 classified and administrative employees who will be laid off.

Additionally, further jobs will be eliminated by attrition, including 41 faculty positions, will be left unfilled for next year.

The University is also planning to eliminate approximately 72 more positions which are expected to become vacant during the coming year. This is primarily the result of an Early Retirement Incentive Program for administrative and classified staff.

The grand total positions to be eliminated over the next year will be approximately 187. However, the number is expected to be larger if the tuition cap is not increased, or if the 15 percent state subsidy reduction were increased.

"I deeply regret the need to lay off loyal BGSU employees. It is one of the most difficult decisions we have ever faced but I am convinced that, given the long-term outlook for state support for higher education, it is a necessary action," Olscamp said.

The state cutbacks are the result of state fiscal problems which have led Governor Voinovich to propose massive budget reductions. The bulk of the cuts will be borne by higher education, which is expecting a 15 percent reduction in subsidies. Higher education will absorb some 61 percent, or $224 million, of the total budget cuts of $370 million.

About three dozen people sought treatment for mostly minor injuries Monday at Hillcrest Hospital, said spokeswoman Theresa Graham. Three people also sought hospital care for aftershock-related injuries in Palm Springs.

Sunday's magnitude 7.4 and 6.5 quakes damaged 4,631 homes and 164 businesses and destroyed 20 homes and 10 businesses, said the San Bernardino County Office of Public Safety. Damage was put at more than $37 million.

A boy was killed and more than 350 people were injured.

Roads and bridges in San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties sustained $500,000 damage.

Ramos receives Philippine power

by Robert H. Reid
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines -- Fidel Ramos, a shrewd political veteran who served under dictatorship and democracy, was sworn in Tuesday as president of a nation plagued by corruption, poverty and rebel violence.

It was the first peaceful transfer of power in 26 years in this nation of 65 million, a former American colony that has been the base for U.S. naval power in the Pacific since World War II.

"Let us begin by telling ourselves the truth," Ramos said in his 30-minute inaugural speech. "Our nation is in trouble and there are no easy answers, no easy fixes for our basic ills."

Hours before the inauguration ceremony, bombs believed to be planted by right-wing extremists exploded at branches of a bank owned by a Ramos supporter. Several thousand leftists marched through the streets denouncing the former defense secretary as a "fascist."

"There will be no honeymoon," leftist leader Nathaniel Santiago said.

The explosions did little damage but underscored the difficulties Ramos will have in uniting this fractious nation, facing with Marxist and Muslim insurgencies and threats from military dissidents.

Several thousand people gathered under heavy security to watch Ramos and his vice president, Joseph Estrada, take their oaths in a park near Manila Bay.

A former aide to dictator Ferdinand Marcos who went on to defend democracy, Ramos won the six-year presidency in elections last month marred by allegations of fraud.

He paid tribute to his predecessor, Corazon Aquino, whom he defended through seven coup attempts. Mrs. Aquino defied the odds and completed her term, fulfilling a pledge to hand over power to an elected successor.

Ramos promised to erase the "anti-American, anti-foreign image" which developed after the government ordered the removal of the last U.S. military base this year from the former U.S. colony, which became independent in 1946.

He also pledged to restore law and order, improve basic services, and show that "government is not unavoidably corrupt and that bureaucracy is not necessarily ineffective."

"We Filipinos have lacked not the way but the will," said the 64-year-old West Point and University of Illinois graduate.

Ramos' victory was a personal triumph for Mrs. Aquino, who supported the country's first Protestant president despite opposition from the Roman Catholic hierarchy and many of her relatives.

"(Mrs. Aquino) has made our democracy a fortress against tyrants. Now we must use it to enable our people to take control of their lives," Ramos said. "To this work of empowering the people ... I dedicate my presidency."

The Philippines has not experienced a peaceful transition since the late President Ferdinand Marcos was first elected in November 1965.

Mrs. Aquino took office in the 1986 uprising that toppled Marcos.

Ramos, a second cousin of Marcos, enters office with the smallest mandate in Philippine history: 23.5 percent of the vote in the seven-way contest May 11.

He served for 17 years under Marcos as chief of the national police.

Captors free U.S. resident

MANILA, Philippines (AP) A California businessman has been freed by Communist rebels after nearly two years in captivity in the northern Philippines, the U.S. Embassy said Tuesday.

U.S. officials said Arvey Drown was flown to the United States-run Subic Bay naval base today for a checkup after reaching Tuguegarao with Roman Catholic priests who negotiated his release.

"We greatly appreciate the efforts of the bishop of Tuguegarao and his colleagues as well as the efforts of the civilian and military officials who helped free (Drown)," the embassy said in a statement.

In Tuguegarao, 250 miles north of Manila, radio station DZNC said Drown arrived Tuesday at Archbishop Diosdado Talamayan's residence there. The station said rebels released Drown on Sunday but it took two days for him and the priests escorting him to reach Tuguegarao.

He was met by his wife and U.S. Embassy officials, the radio station said.

Drown, believed to be in his mid-60s, was abducted Oct. 17, 1990, when Communist rebels stopped his bus at a roadblock near the town of Appari.

He owned a mining company in Colorado and reportedly was in the Philippines to investigate business prospects.

U.N. mediates for Africa

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) -- Nelson Mandela said his meeting Monday with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali gave him new hope of resolving his conflict with the South African government.

"I leave the meeting with a feeling of strength and hope," Mandela told reporters.

Boutros-Ghali, seeking to bring Mandela's African National Congress and South Africa's white government back to the negotiating table, met Saturday with Foreign Minister Pik Botha.

Mandela later met with Nigerian President Ibrahim Babangida and Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe, in one of many private sessions before the opening of the 51-nation Organization of African Unity summit.

The summit was opened Monday afternoon by outgoing OAU President Babangida, who called for a minute of silence in honor of the assassinated Algerian leader Mohamed Boudaif.

Mandela told reporters he was particularly touched by Boudaif's death because Algeria had "played a vital role in the struggle against racial oppression in South Africa." Mandela said he and other ANC fighters received military training in Algeria.

The ANC blames the South African government for the June 17 massacre in Boipatong, south of Johannesburg, which killed at least 42 people. To protest the killings, the ANC broke off black-white political negotiations and demanded an international investigation of violence and police actions.

Mandela is to address the OAU summit.

Mandela on Sunday denied a statement from South African President F.W. de Klerk that negotiations would continue in private.

He also appeared cool about a meeting Saturday between Boutros-Ghali and South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha.

world and to seek to resolve problems with all parties interested," Mandela told reporters.

Mandela said the ANC has presented a memorandum to the South African government with specific demands.

"Whether we are going to continue with negotiations or not is going to depend on how de Klerk responds to those demands. If he responds effectively, then negotiations will continue, but if he does not there is no prospect whatsoever for the continuation of negotiations."

In the meeting with Botha, Boutros-Ghali said he had "quite constructive discussions considering" the negotiations between de Klerk's government and black groups.

Boutros-Ghali confirmed Botha invited him to visit South Africa.

The OAU summit ends Wednesday.

Panama abolishes army

by Juan E. Zamorano
The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY (AP) Parliament on Monday approved a package of constitutional reforms that ban the army, which traditionally has been Panama's strongest institution.

The 58 measures were approved 50-12 by the unicameral legislature after more than two years of debate. A national referendum on the changes will be held Nov. 15.

Panama abolished its Defense Forces following the December 1989 U.S. invasion that toppled their leader, strongman Manuel Noriega. In their place, the country created a national police force.

Nobel Peace Prize laureate Oscar Arias last week praised the proposed banning of the army, saying it would promote democracy, law and social justice. Arias is the former president of neighboring Costa Rica, which abolished its army in 1948.

Arias said the changes "tend to consecrate Panama's commitment to the cause of peace."

Panama's previous constitution was written and amended during periods of military rule.

The reforms call for a police force under presidential control that would be banned from involvement in party politics.

The Revolutionary Democratic Party opposed the reforms, arguing that Panama needs an army to defend the Panama Canal when the United States turns over full control in the year 2000.

It also argued that if Panama banned its own army, it should also demand a withdrawal of U.S. troops from Panamanian soil.

Party deputy Mario Rognoni indicated his group will campaign against the constitutional changes before the referendum.

The proposals approved Monday also modify the court system and set up an autonomous tribunal to rule on electoral disputes. They would give parliament the right to act against the president or judges if grave crimes occurred.

Metalheads versus Lemonheads

Saigon Kick
The Lizard
Third Stone/Atlantic Records

If you like rock and metal bands such as Metallica, Queensryche or even Firehouse, you'll probably like the metallic guitar sound of Saigon Kick. This 4-year-old Miami band was once known for being thrown out of every club they played - they were simply rude.

But after the release of their self-titled first album, Saigon Kick earned some respect. They dominated the South Florida Rock Awards for three consecutive years, and they began landing gigs with such national acts as Ratt, Extreme, Cheap Trick and Ozzy Osbourne.

The Lizard, the group's second album, has much to offer - even a few songs for those who prefer a tamer type of music.

The central track, "Hostile Youth," is a song about rebellion and its sporadic music reflects this with a metal-sounding chorus between the smoother verses.

The band's vocals are definitely supreme. Check out "Love Is on the Way," a good ballad with fine-tuned singing from lead vocalist Matt Kramer, backed up by guitarist Jason Bieler. Bieler also produced the album.

Saigon Kick's punk/rock rude attitude from their earlier days shows in the track "My Dog," a short, screaming song about a man's realization that his dog has been killed in the street.

The hostile lyrics of "God of 42nd Street" and "Peppermint Tribe" have obvious anti-religious undertones, and "All Alright" deals with a drug-induced suicide. The tracks "Freedom" and "Body Bags" point out some of the other troubles with the world today, such as war and government corruption: "They light the sky, so many die/For what they see is wrong or right."

On a lighter note, the title track and the track "Feel the Same Way" both have a good beat and are quite enjoyable. The romantic lyrics of "All I Want" are alluring as well.

Aside from some of the lyrics, which were pretty graphic, The Lizard is a good listen, and Saigon Kick's talent is improving every step of the way.

Lemonheads
It's a Shame About Ray
Atlantic

The first time I got a dose of Lemonheads, I was a senior in high school and a friend of mine had a copy of Hate Your Friends in his car. The energy, humor and simplicity of the band's 1987 debut l.p. had me addicted on the first hit and we almost knocked the car over from slamming against the doors. Naturally, I was excited to hear about the release of It's a Shame About Ray.

However, the excitement soon turned to shock when I heard a track from the album (in another friend's car - go figure). Not knowing who we were listening to, I thought for a minute it might be Lush, or some other light, alternative, I-wish-I-was-Morrissey rock band.

That single track was not enough to disappoint me, however, and on a closer listen to the entire album, the initial shock metamorphosed into a dull, trancelike version of stunned. The songs are by no means bad - just different.

But, considering the fact that guitarist/vocalist/songwriter Evan Dando is the only original Lemonhead left, the change should not be surprising. This time around, Dando is joined by drummer David Ryan (who also played on Lemonheads' 1990 release, Lovey) and bassist/vocalist Juliana Hatfield (of Blake Babies and also a solo artist). The title track, "Rockin' Stroll," written from the point of view of a baby in a stroller, starts off with a Rush-like guitar riff, but soon shifts into being about the only upbeat song on the album. "Confetti" is about Dando's parents' divorce and how it could have affected his behavior with women.

The title track is a catchy little ditty, but leaves something to be desired. "My Drug Buddy" has the same catchiness, but is a much better song. "Bit Part" is one of the better tunes with a classic Dando refrain ("I just want a bit part in your life").

"Alison's Starting to Happen," the best song on the album, was originally written about a friend of Dando's coming on to a fun drug, but eventually became a love song ("She's the puzzle piece behind the couch/That made the sky complete"). "Hannah and Gabi" sounds like a Steve Miller imitation at best.

Of course, a Lemonheads' album could not possibly be complete without some bizarre cover. In the past, fans have been given the gift of covers by Suzanne Vega, Kiss and Mike Nesmith. This time around, the cool cover is a light, off-handed rendition of "Frank Mills," a non-rhyming song from the Broadway musical Hair.

Squeeze my Lemonhead: Evan Dando, the man behind the rind

All in all, this album is pleasant to listen to while studying or sleeping. However, if Hate Your Friends is not part of your collection, buy it first. Although it is a good album songwise, It's a Shame About Ray simply lacks the energy of the group's earlier work.

Nuggets win big in draft

Steve Seasley
Sports Editor

There were numerous winners and losers in last Wednesday's NBA draft, and I am proud to say the Cavaliers were not among the losers. However, the Cavs were not winners either. Cleveland failed to have a selection in the draft due to previous trades. I wish they would have made an attempt to move into the draft or had made a trade with another team. Those who take risks win. The Cavs have remained stagnant.

While the Cavs sat around the television dreaming about a possible NBA Championship, the Knicks, Jazz, Bucks, Nuggets, and Heat made radical draft moves to improve their respective clubs for next season.

While the Knicks appeared to be the big winners of the draft, the Denver Nuggets actually benefitted the most. They acquired LaPhonso Ellis of Notre Dame and Bryant Stith of Virginia in the first round. At 6-8, Ellis is an athletic forward who will fit in well with the up-tempo style of the Nuggets. Stith was the most underrated guard in the draft. He may have more of an impact than Jimmy Jackson in his first NBA season. Denver is loaded with youth, and new coach Dan Issel brings a refreshing attitude to the Nugget camp.

The Knicks acquired Rolando Blackman from Dallas for a first round draft choice in 1995. They also selected Hubert Davis of North Carolina in the first round.

On the surface the Knicks came out ahead, but when you look deeper into the acquisitions, uncertainty looms. Blackman was a scoring machine with Dallas during his youth, but his days of youth are numbered. How effective will he be in New York? His defense is what scares me. Defense wins games, wild shot selection doesn't.

Davis is another question mark. Everyone says he is such of a great shooter, but can he perform the other essentials of the game? His skinny frame and height worries me. At 6-4, will he be able to cover fellow guards like Michael Jordan, Clyde Drexler and Reggie Miller? I don't think so. New York will need to make more substantial moves if they are to capture the title.

Utah traded their draft picks and sent Blue Edwards and Eric Murdock to Milwaukee for Jay Humphries and Larry Krystkowiak. This was a great trade for both squads. Milwaukee drafted Lee Mayberry and Todd Day from Arkansas in the first round. Day is a brilliant scorer and Mayberry was the best point guard in the draft.

Miami surprised everyone by selecting Harold Miner of USC with the 12th selection in the draft. Miner has been compared to Michael Jordan and is a potent scorer, but needs to strengthen his defense. The Heat now have a surplus of guards and will be looking for teams interested in either Glen Rice, Kevin Edwards, Brian Shaw, Miner, or Steve Smith. Did you hear that Cleveland?

Other draft picks of notice are Clarence Weatherspoon of Southern Mississippi by Philadelphia, Latrell Sprewell of Alabama by Golden State, and Byron Houston of Oklahoma State by Chicago.

Weatherspoon is a powerful force in the pivot who uses his robust body to create space in the lane. He is a good jumper and a ferocious rebounder. He has a chance to be a star in the NBA. Sprewell is an athletic guard who portrays the image of the Golden State Warriors. He has the unique ability to create his own shots. Coach Don Nelson always seems to find a gem in the late picks of the draft. Houston is a dominating presence in the paint who slipped down in the draft because he is only 6-5, but was listed as 6-8 during his playing days at Oklahoma State.

Switching from the draft to the Olympics, did anyone see Karl Malone at halftime of the Team USA basketball game versus Cuba. Team USA won by about 80 points, but athletics isn't everything. Malone was interviewed by Bob Costas on NBC during the halftime segment. I was embarrassed for Karl Malone. His speech was filled with flawed, third-grade grammar that made me sad and angry to be an American. Here is a man who is worth millions of dollars and is worshiped by basketball fans around the world, but he can not speak in a coherent, educated fashion. Karl Malone is a product of the American society. I feel sorry for him.

Steve Seasley is a sports writer for the News.

USA's Stockton out of Olympics

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) John Stockton's broken leg and a lackluster first half against Canada proved that the U.S. Dream Team will not be a smooth-running machine all summer.

X-rays showed that Stockton, originally diagnosed as having a bruised calf, has an undisplaced fracture of the lower leg. Stockton will miss the rest of the Tournament of the Americas and probably the Olympics.

Rosters for the Games in Barcelona must be set by July 15.

Stockton was injured while the Dream Team was struggling in the first half of a 105-61 victory over the Canadians.

While a 44-point decision hardly can be called a cliffhanger, it's clear that the U.S. team plays better with a little motivation.

So what will it take to get the Americans going tonight against Panama, who beat Cuba on Monday to get back in the race for the Olympics?

"We're going to take back the canal," said Charles Barkley, who had 19 points Monday night and has been the leading scorer for the United States in each of its two victories.

Whatever happens against Panama, the Americans may have to play without Larry Bird (sore back) as well as Stockton. Fortunately for coach Chuck Daly, Patrick Ewing came back earlier than expected from a dislocated right thumb.

"We'll alternate Scottie Pippen, Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan at point guard," Daly said. "But injuries are taking a toll."

The Dream Team outshot the Canadians 53.3 percent to 34.4 percent for the game, but the Americans managed only 47.6 percent shooting in the first half and had just a 50-33 lead at halftime, 23 fewer than Sunday's halftime margin against the Cubans.

"I expected us to not be as sharp," Daly said. "We weren't as emotional, Canada's size inside gave us trouble and we didn't shoot as well."

Karl Malone scored 15 points before fouling out with 5:10 left. Jordan scored 14 points and Chris Mullin and Johnson had 13 each.

Former Los Angeles Laker Mike Smrek had 14 points and Al Kristmanson had 11 for Canada. Canada was outbounded 54-32.

"We battled them pretty hard and had the game pretty close in the first half," Canadian coach Ken Shields said. "We tried desperately not to give them transition opportunities. But the biggest difference with their team is that all their guys are runners."

America's battle for qualifiers

by Jim O'Connell
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) Brazil became the first official Olympic qualifier from the Tournament of the Americas.

The Dream Team's spot in the Barcelona Games was almost guaranteed the day the roster of NBA All-Stars was announced to represent the United States.

Brazil (3-0), however, did it on the court Monday night when it beat Mexico 90-87 to secure one of the four berths this hemisphere will have for Barcelona. Even if Brazil were to be upset by Uruguay in its final qualifying-round game on Wednesday, it would win all tiebreakers courtesy of a 23-point win over Puerto Rico and a 47-point victory over Venezuela.

"We didn't come here to go to the NBA party. We came here to qualify," Brazilian coach Jose Medalha said.

The Dream Team (2-0), which beat Canada 105-61 Monday night, will have to qualify without point guard John Stockton. He was originally diagnosed with a bruised calf after being kicked by Michael Jordan, but X-rays later showed he has an undisplaced fracture of the lower right leg. He will miss the remainder of the qualifying tournament and his status for Barcelona won't be known for a while.

'Dream Team' crushes crass Canucks, 105-61

by Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. -- Crush thy neighbor.

That was the Dream Team's assignment for Monday night against Canada. Despite a lackluster first half, the U.S. national team rolled to a 105-61 victory that pushed the Americans closer to an Olympic berth.

After a near-perfect performance in their debut Sunday against Cuba, the Americans struggled with Larry Bird on the bench with a sore back and John Stockton sidelined with a bruised right calf.

Charles Barkley led the U.S. team with 19 points while Karl Malone scored 15 before fouling out with 5:10 left. Michael Jordan scored 14 points and Magic Johnson and Chris Mullin had 13 each for the United States.

Mike Smrek had 14 points and Al Kristmanson 11 for Canada, which was outbounded 54-32.

The expected blowout finally took shape early in the first half with a 15-0 run capped by Scottie Pippen's 3-pointer and dunk that made the score 71-40 with 14:05 left.

The Canadians played on even terms with the Dream Team for the next six minutes before the Americans spurted again, taking a 101-59 lead with 2:48 remaining.

In other games at the Tournament of the Americas Monday, Puerto Rico defeated Uruguay 104-88 and Panama beat Cuba 86-67. Later Monday night, Brazil met Mexico.

The loss did not ruin Canada's chances of being one of the four teams from the tournament to make the Olympics. A victory over Panama on Wednesday probably will be enough to send the Canadians to the quarterfinals on Thursday night, when they would need to win in order to gain a berth in Barcelona.

The U.S. team officially has not clinched an Olympic berth although its two victories in the tournament have made it virtually certain the Americans will make it.

The Canadians, who lost to Cuba before the Cubans fell by 79 points to the Dream Team on Sunday, gained some respect in the first half, trailing just 31-24 with 6:57 left after a 9-2 run keyed by two jumpers by Bill Wennington.

Unseeded McEnroe wins, advances to quarterfinals

by Stephen Wilson
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England -- Boris Becker overwhelmed Wayne Ferreira in the decisive fifth set today to reach the Wimbledon quarterfinals for the seventh time in eight years.

In a match that had been suspended by darkness Monday night and delayed by rain for more than three hours today, Becker prevailed 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-7 (6-8), 6-1.

Ferreira, the 14th seed, had the momentum when he won the fourth set tiebreaker Monday. But he appeared helpless Tuesday against an all-court onslaught from the fourth-seeded German.

Becker won eight of the first nine points while racing to a 3-0 lead. He held serve at 15 in the first game, broke at love in the second with two forehand passing shots and saved a break point in the third game with a service winner.

Becker served out the match in the next game at 15, with Ferreira netting a forehand return on the first match point.

Becker, a three-time Wimbledon champion, will face 12th-seeded Andre Agassi in the quarterfinals. The other quarterfinalists are No. 2 Stefan Edberg, No. 3 Michael Stich, No. 5 Pete Sampras, No. 8 Goran Ivanisevic, No. 9 Guy Forget and unseeded John McEnroe.

After more than a week of dry weather, rain hit Wimbledon for the first time today, delaying the start of play for three hours and 10 minutes.

The women's quarterfinals were set for today: Monica Seles vs. Nathalie Tauziat, Gabriela Sabatini vs. Jennifer Capriati, Martina Navratilova vs. Katerina Maleeva and Steffi Graf vs. Natalia Zvereva.

McEnroe reached the quarterfinals Monday for the first time in three years, beating Russian qualifier Andrei Olhovskiy the man who ended Jim Courier's Grand Slam quest - 7-5, 6-3, 7-6 (12-10).

It was McEnroe's second consecutive straight-set victory and proved that, despite his 33 years, he remains one of the best grass-court players in the world.

"When the guy's playing well he's capable of anything," said Andre Agassi. "When he's playing his game, nobody does it better. ... I wouldn't be surprised to see him win the tournament."

McEnroe downplayed his chances as a legitimate title contender but said he still has a shot. "I'm the lowest on the list (of the quarterfinalists)," he said. "(But) the fact I'm still in ... if a couple of guys go down, anything can happen."
